

There's two sides to about everything. That goes for the Sigler-Keyes feud at Lansing.

The governor's ire at the administration's legislative program by a "handful" of senators was publicly aired before Michigan Associated Press editors in annual session at Higgins Lake.

Lambasting the senate which he termed "the worst I've known in many years," Governor Sigler charged Lieut. Governor Eugene B. Keyes with playing politics. Keyes encouraged a "small group of prima donnas" to obstruct administration bills, the governor declared.

Sigler said he did not believe in cracking the whip over the legislature. Each branch of government — legislative, judicial and executive — should always remain independent and free of one another.

Several legislative observers who watched the conduct of the Senate during the five-month session are inclined to agree with Governor Sigler as to Keyes' behind the scenes meddling. The Dearborn dentist-lawyer-engineer does not like to play second fiddle.

The same persons, however, are critical of the governor's hands-off attitude in getting results from the legislature. They say it just won't work. For example: During critical periods when vital matters were awaiting action, Sigler was apt as not to be in Marquette or Washington or elsewhere. His speaking engagements were numerous and frequent.

The Governor's passion for speech-making and flying — and the two fit together nicely — led Capitol observers to several speculations. One conclusion is that the governor is yet to learn the ropes of how to get things done: legislators want to see the governor, not his lieutenants; the governor must stay on the job and "crack the whip" with diplomatic persuasion and force; he must develop his own leaders in the House and Senate.

Another speculation is that the Governor does not expect to run for a second term. He is enjoying the power of office and the prestige that goes with it.

Critics of Sigler feel that the governor, faced with an unsuccessful legislative record, has sought to "cover up" his failures by seeking to make others the scapegoats. The McKay "forces," for example, were charged by the governor with attempting to scuttle the program. Then Keyes was blamed in the Higgins Lake statements.

Our own observation is that there is some truth to both sides of the above situation. We will not go into details. We observe, also, that the administration has 18 months left to complete its record. When you check over what the legislature did during its five-month 1947 session, you will agree with Douglas Graham, chief of the Lansing bureau of the United Press: "Sigler came out of his first legislative bout in fair shape. Most of his program was adopted, although he had to wait until almost the last minute for some of it."

As for the deficit, variously estimated and sure to run into millions, that's a horse of another color. The governor feels that a deficit may help to convince voters that "the surplus" at Lansing is largely fiction and that the sales tax diversion amendment was only another way to force new and higher tax on the taxpayer.

At least, the sales tax issue is still alive. The legislature voted to resubmit the amendment to the voters in November, 1948, along with a move to revise the State Constitution.

Training Subsidy To Be Paid Nurses

Board of trustees of Lansing's Edward W. Sparrow Hospital and the Edward W. Sparrow Hospital School of Nursing committee have approved a nurse subsidy program financed by the hospital, Glen W. Fausey, director of the hospital, announced Thursday. This plan is to be placed in operation September 1, not only to stimulate student nurse recruitment but to assist those who enrolled after the discontinuance of United States cadet nurse corps program," Mr. Fausey said. "It is understood this plan would be curtailed if Congress passes a bill now pending to re-establish the cadet nurse program."

The student will receive no stipend during her pre-clinical or probationary period of six months, Mr. Fausey said, but $10 per month will be paid the student for the following 10 months, $15 for the next 10 months, and $20 for the last 10 months. During the 36 months' nurses training course the student will receive $450 in aid. The entrance fee still will be required as uniforms, books, capes and other equipment must be purchased.

The policy established by the board affects those students in training as of July 1, exclusive of cadet nurses. Also those students entering the school in September will participate in the subsidy program after their probationary period. It is the feeling of those concerned with the future of nursing that more students enter schools of nursing in view of the shortage of nurses. In order to attract a greater number of students, many of whom might need assistance, it was felt that the subsidy plan was most beneficial.

Grayling Ground Loops

Activity was fast and furious at the Grayling Airport again last week-end, with about 15 planes setting down here. Among the planes was a National Guard C-47 transport plane with Colonel Robertson aboard. He is the head of the War Assets Regional Office at Detroit. He accompanied Colonel Nichols of the Michigan National Guard here on an inspection trip. According to information, it appears that several liaison planes and possibly one or two C-47's will be at the local airport during the encampment of the National Guard at Camp Grayling.

A Grumman Wildcat also was here over the week-end. Newly elected Chairman of the State Conservation Commission, Don McClelland of Detroit, was aboard. A Dow Chemical Company plane, a Beechcraft, landed here at 3:30 Sunday afternoon from Texas, where it took off at 8 a. m. It brought a number of company officials from Dow's Texas plant for an outing at Higgins Lake.

County Clerk Leo Lovely and Bernard Fowler are the two newest members of Grayling Air Service's group who have soloed at the local airport.

Carpenter - Easton Vows Spoken

Mr. Easton has been a Grayling resident for four years, having previously lived in Pontiac.

George Quinn Named Legion Commander

George H. Quinn was named Commander of Grayling Post No. 106 of the American Legion at the post's annual election of officers held at the Legion Hall, Monday evening.

Richard Rasmussen was named Vice-Commander; Robert LaChapelle, Finance Officer; Gerald Herrick, Adjutant; Van P. Smith, Chaplain; and Ross P. Thompson, Sergeant-at-Arms.

Reappointed were Alfred Hanson as Service Officer, and Robert Neafie as Judge Advocate.

The members extended a vote of thanks to the retiring officers on the fine work that was accomplished the past year.

Week-end guests of the Herbert Stephan family were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Swift of Kego Harbor, Mrs. Florence Van Amberg and Claude Potter of New Hudson. They also visited other relatives and friends while here.

Here lie the remains of a driver who thought he could drink and still drive a car. Racing down the highway at a dangerous speed, his car wandered off the edge of the pavement, dragged on the sandy shoulder, and was wrecked into a spin. Drunken drivers are potential murderers of every other motorist who comes near them on the road. They were involved in more than 5,000 fatal accidents last year. National Conservation Bureau safety specialists say even one or two drinks close up reactions, make judgment unsure, increase chances of accident three to four times.

Intensive And Continuous Efforts Needed To Control Traffic Deaths

By Major General Philip B. Fleming, Administrator of the Federal Works Agency and General Chairman of the President's Highway Safety Conference

Last year 33,500 persons died in automobile accidents in the United States. That fact may not register very strongly. After all, 33,500 is just a figure.

Maybe you can visualize the extent of the slaughter a little better if you will imagine that many people lined up in parade formation and marching from noon to sundown to pass a reviewing stand.

Or, suppose all those people had been killed in the same place — in front of your home, say. Then you could have stood on your front porch day and night, week in and week out, and witnessed a death on the average of every 13 minutes.

That's as many people as live in such a city as Elkhart, Indiana, or Paducah, Kentucky, or Watertown, Massachusetts. They are all dead now, killed in accidents that could easily have been avoided. Hundreds of thousands of orphans, widows and bereaved parents are left to mourn in every city of the land.

Not Worst Year

Even so, 1946 was not the worst year for traffic fatalities. All things considered, the record for that year was pretty good. The most tragic year in motoring history was in 1941, when 37,512 persons were killed. That was the high point to which traffic fatalities had steadily climbed over a 30-year period beginning about 1912, when 1,758 died. After 1912, the popularity of the automobile grew, and so did the number of deaths. Year by year the number killed increased, with a few exceptions — notably during the war when gasoline rationing drastically curtailed driving.

After Japan surrendered and gasoline rationing was abandoned, fatal accidents shot upward. In the first four or five months of last year, people were being done to death in such staggering numbers that it was confidently predicted that the fatality list would exceed that for 1941. So when I say that the record for 1946 was "pretty good," what I mean is that it might have been much worse, that the rising curve of fatalities was turned downward, and that the number killed in proportion to miles driven was substantially less than in the year before. The improvement seems to be continuing into 1947.

It is significant that the tide turned last year following the President's Highway Safety Conference held at Washington early in May. Alarmed by the senseless and inexcusable slaughter, President Truman called together the Governors of the States, mayors of the larger cities, legislators, engineers, judges, educators, and other outstanding citizens to see if some means could not be devised to put an end to it.

Adopt Program

The Conference adopted an Action Program which contained recommendations of experts on various phases of the problem. Engineers, for example, showed how safety highways could be built. Lawyers stressed the importance of uniform traffic regulations. Judges and police officials drew up a list of the best techniques for traffic law enforcement. Educators drafted a program for teaching safety in the schools.

The 2,000 delegates to the Conference took the Action Program to their home communities, determined to put it into effect among their own friends and neighbors. Some 20 of the Governors called safety conferences of their own to supplement the President's Conference. So did the mayors of some of the larger cities.

Need Support

Everywhere it was agreed that brief "spasm" campaigns for traffic safety, which run for a few weeks and are then forgotten, bring no lasting benefits. Rather, the need is for intensive effort on the part of police, judges, educators, engineers, and the general public every day of the year. Each one of us, as driver or pedestrian, must not only support the efforts of our public officials, but we must accept in good faith our own individual responsibility. Each man, woman and child must accept in his own conscience, as before the law, the responsibility for the consequences of his own acts.

Where the Action Program has been put into effect and backed up by intensive effort, you will find traffic fatalities are declining. Where public officials are conducting only occasional "spasm" crusades and the public is indifferent, you will find such fatalities rising.

This is the first of thirteen articles dealing with the subject of traffic safety. Other articles to follow in the Avalanche by authoritative spokesmen in the safety field, will show concretely how accidents are caused, how they can be prevented, what they cost in property damage as well as in lives lost, and what you, as a citizen, can do about them.

MPA Enjoys Traverse City Hospitality

Nearly 300 Michigan editors and publishers and their wives enjoyed the unbounded hospitality of Traverse City last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, when the Michigan Press Association held its annual summer outing at the Park Place Hotel.

Contests of golf, tennis, fishing, horseshoes, bridge, pingpong and other diversions paid off in handsome prizes for the winners. The contests for the most part were staged under the direction of Traverse City publisher Austin C. Batdorf, his family and staff.

Many of the prizes and gifts were donated by Traverse City manufacturers and merchants, as well as the Chamber of Commerce. A Saturday afternoon lawn party at the beautiful Batdorf home on the east arm of Traverse Bay was a high spot of the summer meeting, along with a dinner dance at the Park Place Saturday evening.

The Avalanche and Grayling were represented at the summer get-together by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Strong. Each woman present was given a hand-woven basket made by the Indians of Peshawab, near Traverse. The baskets were filled with various food products of the area's canning and preserving plants.

Kiwanis Club Notes

The members of the Grayling Fire Department were the guests of the Kiwanis Club of Grayling on Monday evening at a dinner at the AuSable River Inn. No special program was scheduled for the evening; however, Earl Burns welcomed the firemen and expressed the club members' thanks to them for the fine work the department has done in the past.

Fire Chief Middle LaMotte responded for the firemen.

William Joseph was welcomed into the club as the newest member of Kiwanis in Grayling. Lieut. Governor Charles Moore and Secretary Emil Giegling reported on a trip that was made to Marquette, Michigan, last week, where the Kiwanis Club of Cadillac is sponsoring a new club. The new Marquette Club will be a member of this division.

Kiwanis softball players are getting things lined up for the first of a series of five games, starting tomorrow night at the City Park softball field.

Roscommon Wins; Who Next Game

Meet Twining Here On July Fourth

After dropping a contest to the league-leading Roscommon nine last Sunday by an 8 to 6 count, the Grayling Independents travel to Mio this Sunday to face a team that has a record of two wins against two defeats — the same as Grayling.

A holiday, non-league game has been scheduled here for the Fourth of July, with the leaders of the central division of the Northeastern Michigan Baseball League, Twining, opposing the locals. The Twining team has a record of four straight wins so far this season — and no defeats. They box a top-notch battery combination with Bob Ostrander on the mound and Bob Lammy behind the plate; also a member of the Twining nine is Owen Reed, who is well known in Grayling.

Last Sunday's contest here saw Roscommon draw first blood with a run in the first half of the second inning, with Grayling coming back with three counters in their half of that inning. Roscommon pushed over five big runs in their half of the fourth, and were never headed off from their victory.

Roscommon scored its 8 runs from 10 hits while committing 5 errors. Grayling could muster but 6 safeties and bobbled the ball an equal number of times as their opponents. Gildner started on the hill for Grayling and struck out five and issued one walk. Keway, who took over, struck out 4, issued 2 passes and hit one batsman. Emery, Roscommon hurler, whiffed 8, walked 4 and hit one. Gildner allowed 7 hits in 3 innings, while Keway allowed 3 hits in 6 innings.

Thompson, Emery, Hinman and McGinnis all hit doubles, with Granger and Hinman collecting triples for the extra-base blows of the game. Thompson collected two hits, with Carlson, Granger, Gildner and Kellogg adding one each to complete Grayling's attack. Ballou got 3 for 5 for Roscommon, with Hinman having 2 for 4, and Knapp and Emery hitting 2 for 5.

In other league games Sunday, Atlanta trimmed Mio, 16 to 3; Lewiston defeated Comins, 9 to 8; and Rose City dropped Fairview, 5 to 3. Lewiston is at Rose City this coming Sunday, and Fairview travels to Comins, with Atlanta at Roscommon. Roscommon made up a rained-out contest at Rose City, Wednesday night. Grayling's lone rained-out contest, a game with Fairview, has not yet been scheduled for replay.

Crawford County Library

The annual Work Shop season for the County Librarian is in full swing with a Work Shop in session this week at Camp Shaw in the Upper Peninsula and one opening for this area at Higgins Lake on July 7. The first Work Shop of the season was held at Waldenwoods, June 2 to 6, and the season will close with a session at Clear Lake, August 25-29. These summer library schools give every librarian in the state an opportunity to meet with fellow-workers, discuss mutual problems, share ideas and success stories, and receive regular instruction in library management.

Crawford County Library will be closed during the week of July 7, while Mrs. Augustus Funck, the local librarian, attends the school at Higgins Lake.

It has been quite some time since the local library had a new book to offer the mystery fans, but they will find that "Summer Stranger," by Louise Field Cooper, was well worth the long wait. The Book League's June selection introduced Emily, living with Aunt Isabel and Uncle Joseph in the capacity of a servant rather than a relative, who finds herself involved in a series of accidents that have terrifying implications. With no one to confide in but Stephen, the handsome vegetable boy who runs every day with his vegetable truck, Emily is lonely and desperate. This study of a seventeen-year-old girl's search for love and security, of tender romance, of inspired greed and terror, is guaranteed to appeal to all who thrive on a diet of suspense.

ENTERTAINS AT SHOWER

Mrs. Norman Madsen was hostess at a stork shower given at her home Monday evening to honor Mrs. Sandra Thompson. There were 18 guests present. Entertainment for the evening included making dolls out of peanuts, crepe paper ribbon, lace, and what have you. There were several very clever results, but the prizes for this were won by Mrs. George Hilton and Mrs. Svend Madsen, of Gaylord.

Decorations were pink and blue, including a cake decorated in each color. With these, cream puffs filled with ice cream and covered with chocolate sauce were served. Mrs. Thompson received many lovely gifts.

MICHELSON MEMORIAL CHURCH SCHOOL
A large number of tourists and summer residents were welcome visitors at Michelson Memorial Church, Sunday, and helped to fill the vacancies left by many of the regular members who are on vacation.

In the primary department, Mrs. Harry Souder taught for Miss Ernestine Stephan, and Mrs. Ernest Larson taught for Mrs. Robert Strong.

The Junior Camp group was back in full force, some bearing evidences of last week's accident, but all in good spirits. Next Sunday the intermediates leave for their camp near Sebawaing. In the intermediate group, Joan Bond of the eighth grade and Shirley Souder, Louise Lutz and Tommy Hilton, of the seventh, are entitled to the trip on the strength of their perfect attendance records. Others registered to attend are: Geraldine Larke, eighth grade; Jeanine Sorenson, seventh; Mary Lou Larke, Jimmie Bond and Ronnie Larson, sixth.

WHAT WE DID AT CAMP
By Sylvia Robertson and Rita Sorenson

We got up at 15 to 8, got dressed and went out for flag raising and inspection. Then we had breakfast. Next came cabin duty, clean up our cabins. Then came classes—flowers, skies and trees. After that came swimming. The water was almost always warm. Then we ate dinner and had K. P. Next we had time to buy things, ice cream, candy or gum. Then it was time to rest. Another class came next, then tennis, swimming or crafts. We were in crafts. After that, we went swimming. Then it was time for supper. After supper we either sang songs, or someone told jokes. Next it was time to do anything we wanted to, or free time. Then we either sang or someone told us stories. Next we went to bed at 9:00. We had lots of fun, and on the 21st we came home.

Letters To The Editor

McNary, Ariz.
June 15, 1947.

Dear Editor:

Arrived at my destination a week ago. Had a lovely trip all way out, but had a lay over of 10 hours in Chicago. Arrived in Holbrook, Arizona, on time. Bob was there to meet me, had been there since 9 in the morning. He had driven eighty miles to reach the depot, as we are camped in White Mountains about eight miles from McNary. It is lovely here, quite warm through the day but it gets quite cool at night. There are lots of pine trees here, all good size. I have been going with Bob to look at his traps. We have six beavers in the live crate since I got here and tomorrow with our friend, Bud Fox, we shall take them near Springville, Arizona and plant them. We are camped on an Indian Reservation, so I see many Indians every day, riding their mules and horses and also see the Indian women carrying their babies on their backs. We are both O.K. Hope all is well at home.

McNary, Arizona.

The Forces of Freedom

It is estimated that there are more men under arms now than shortly before the Second World War. Save in Western Hemisphere, there is no real peace anywhere on earth. Violence, disorder, oppression—these are the symbols of the postwar world. And, as inevitably occurs in an age of suspicion and unrest, the liberties of peoples everywhere are being limited and destroyed.

The position of the United States in this dark and dangerous time is clear. We, with a handful of allies, none of whom are economically or militarily powerful, are the last citadel of individual freedom. With few exceptions, the English speaking world alone still maintains and respects the basic rights of man—and even in that world are ominous signs of weakening. The American government, in its dealings with the other powers, is the leader of the forces of freedom against the forces of darkness and the total state.

The duty of the United States is equally clear. To put it in a phrase this duty is to maintain our strength. And strength can be divided into two different and distinct classifications. There is military strength—the strength of force. Much as Americans hate war and thought of war, we must maintain this, in the interest of self-preservation.

Second and still more vital, there is the kind of inner strength which only a free people can possess. This is the heart and soul of a nation and its institutions. It is a nation's greatest resource in time of trial. And it rests upon the proposition that the rights of the individual are inviolate. So long as we have this, we shall be ready to meet what ever the coming years bring.

AUSABLE'S FAME SPREADS TO SOUTH AMERICA

The fame of Michigan trout fishing reaches as far as Brazil. Dr. J. A. Wilgen of Rio de Janeiro stopped at the Mio district conservation department office to buy his fishing license last week after flying 8,000 miles from his home city to Detroit. The last leg of the trip, by auto with friends, was to the popular AuSable River, where he intends to fish for trout until July 1.

"Cook's Column"

Fishermen have been plagued by quite a lot of bad weather so far this season. A lot too much rain, plus chilly weather has put a crimp in the "fishing fever". But (we hope) the weather will be nice from now on.

We hope to be doing quite a bit of fishing this week, with Junior and his wife, Gene, hence the wish for good and continued nice fishing weather. Junior wired from St. Louis (Mo.) Friday that he was loading the family, which includes Baby Gail, aboard their Plymouth Saturday, expecting to arrive by Sunday.

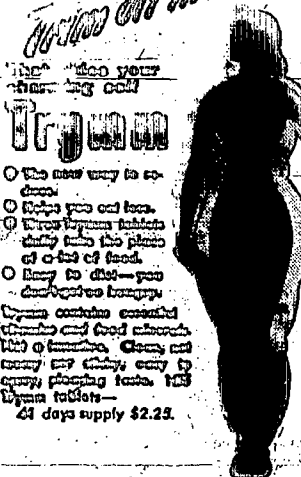

Dad's Day has more than a passing significance with many of us old-timers of the rod and reel. Do you remember when Dad gave you preliminary fishing lessons, "way back when you were not so long out of the triangle garden, using a bent pin for a hook? "Them was the days," eh, old-timer? What wouldn't we give to have Dad a-fishing with us today! But he has been along the Elysian streams for 10, these many years. And, we believe, when we get to that Land Beyond, Dad will be waiting and tell us to "Come on, son, let's go fishing!"

We note that even Michigan, the country so loved by every real outdoorsman, is now having trouble with pollution. Down in Ohio, where we were born and grew up, there are few streams untouched by pollution. And if we are to keep Michigan's streams and lakes pure—if Michigan is to continue to attract the hordes of fishermen and vacationers—the time to get busy in stopping and preventing poisoning of the waters of our great State is right now. Once pollution sets in, like leprosy, it is hard to cure.

Clarence Roberts caught a nice 19 1/4-inch brown trout last week. Used a deer hair fly. But we have not heard of many good catches like this of recent. Dang the weather, anyhow!

Health NEWS

Sun Glasses

Taking cognizance of the many requests for information, the American Medical Society recently issued some reassuring advice relative to the wearing of sun glasses. People have inquired as to whether or not use of these glasses is injurious to the eyes, and here's the medical society's answer:

If your glasses are dark enough, they'll prove comforting to your eyes on an average bright day.

Motorists find them helpful on long drives; aviators who must fly into the sun won't take off without them. For vacationists they come in especially handy at the beach.

Sun glasses have the effect of reducing the total amount of light that enters the eyes and here's a much-discussed point: Are they extra beneficial because they do not transmit the so-called "harmful" ultraviolet light?

The answer is that they are not. Ordinary white glasses allows only a small amount of ultraviolet light to pass through. The fact is that in order to obtain passage for ultraviolet through a window pane it has to be made especially for that purpose.

And Doctors of Medicine who have studied this subject now declare that a certain amount of ultraviolet light actually is healthful to the eyes, anyway.

So—if your eyes feel better when shielded from the blinding rays of the sun, you needn't be afraid to wear sun glasses.

"Health News" is presented by your Doctor of Medicine as a health service of the Michigan State Medical Society.

CHAPTER VII

Why, it was ridiculous! After being here for that long to be pushed out like a beginner! Kline would set them straight. And if not Kline, he would go to Henry Martin. He would be only too glad to give him the credit he deserved. Basil and Kit were engaged; not that he wanted to hold that over anyone's head, but at his age and with his poor health he knew that both his and his wife's future depended on his job.

Kline, a thin man with hollow eyes, looked up as he entered. His expression was solemn.

"Good morning, Frank." He motioned him to a chair.

"Kline..." he started.

"Yes, Frank. I know what you're going to say. And it's beyond me. There's no mistake. I asked Martin the name twice to make certain—then told him the men wouldn't stand for a thing like that, but he was firm. Martin's a stubborn man. Deeper. If only I could do something..." He threw down the paper he had been holding in his hands in discouragement and walked to the window, his hands in his pockets.

"But why, Kline? Why me?" His face was contorted as if with pain and his eyes were misty.

"That's what I don't know, Frank. There's no explanation."

The man that walked from the office was a broken-hearted old man. He did not even resemble the man that had entered it such a short time before. He walked down the hall and took his coat from the hanger where it had hung daily for so many years, and pulled his hat over his white hair. The office was as silent as though it were in the hushed presence of death.

As he walked out into the yard, he turned to a group of men waiting for a large semi-trailer just pulling in the yard. There were great piles of the heavy pipe waiting to be loaded.

Frank Deeser approached a tall fellow who seemed to be the foreman of the crew. He handed him a slip of paper. The tall young man read it and then looked at him with a puzzled expression.

"What do you want with this kind of a job, Grandpa?"

"Martin sent me here," Deeser looked at the crowd of huskies watching him. "If you'll just explain what I'm to do, please."

The foreman watched him standing with the rest of the crew, slowly shook his head, then looking toward Martindale, he spat on the ground.

The next morning when Kit came to work Johnny knew at once she had been crying. The memory of the unforgettable meeting with Basil was still fresh in his mind and he still gathered much enjoyment from their throwing in the sponge when Kit came on the scene. But when he saw Kit coming up the steps of the office that morning he knew something had gone amiss.

"Something wrong, Kit?" he asked, not knowing whether he should mention her appearance or not.

"No—no, nothing's wrong, Johnny. Just everything, I guess," she answered, hurrying on into the office.

Johnny stopped at Handley's desk. "Do you know where Kit was intending to go for lunch?"

"Why... no, I don't. She's got a date, though, I believe. She just called her boy friend and asked him to stop for her. Sounded as though she was pretty anxious to see him, too," she added, raising her eyebrows.

Basil's Speeding Causes an Accident

Johnny did not like this turn of events. Since Kit had admitted to Basil and Henry that she liked to be with J. D. and himself, she had seemed like a different person, as though she had made a decision and could now be completely herself. She had lunched with them yesterday and last night had declined Johnny's invitation to the show only because she had been invited to a club party. To Johnny, who thought that she was through with Basil, to hear of her calling him this way it was, at least, discouraging.

He and J. D. were going out to Lucy's, an Italian restaurant on the west side of town, for a spaghetti lunch and they climbed into Moses and started. Johnny told J. D. what Handley had told him and how Kit had looked this morning. But J. D. could offer him no explanation. Johnny deduced that something possibly had happened at her uncle's home last night. But why should she be so anxious to see Basil when she had been so angry with him? He decided he would ask her when she returned from lunch.

Lucy was more than glad to see her "Juanny Boy," as she called him, and hurried the couple that were sitting at the front window through their meal so J. D. and Johnny could take their usual place. They had never made any preference and were not even too anxious to sit at this particular table. The window looked out upon a busy street in a poorer section of the town. Many times they had seen children playing in the street and running to the curb when cars came down the street.

The day was one made for football and all the boys from eight on were playing just that. Johnny noticed with sympathy that their field was Jenkins St. The cars interrupted their plays quite often, but they managed to get to the curb in time for the traffic to pass. Johnny watched them, sitting with a full view of the street before him.

"Look at that little fellow. Dad. The one that's got the ball. He pointed, a smile on his face."

"Little coddler, isn't he? Couldn't be much more than eight or nine."

J. D. turned in his chair so he could better see him.

Across his son's face J. D. saw a look of horror and before he could look back to the street he heard the screech of brakes and the sharp cry of a child hurt.

Johnny had seen the speeding car racing down the street and recognized it immediately as Basil's. The boys had also seen it and scattered in every direction, all of them running free except the little one carrying the ball. His legs were too short to make it in the face of the speed of the approaching car and it struck him, throwing him to the curb like a rag doll.

The car half started up again and then as if the driver had given the matter second thought he pulled to the curb a little piece from where the child lay.

Johnny was outside in an instant and kneeling beside the unconscious child waiting for the doctor when Basil and Kit reached them. J. D. looked at Kit and shook his head sadly.

"Well, is he hurt? Of course no one could blame me! You saw it, Davis. The brats were all over the street. It's good that I managed to get only one!" Basil was excited although he tried to cover his nervousness.

Kit stood helplessly beside him as though some invisible chain held her to her companion.

While the doctor was examining the unconscious child, who for safety reasons had not been moved from where he lay on the curb, Johnny and J. D. stood aside and waited for the report.

Basil had gone back towards the car and was nervously smoking a cigarette. Kit, who stood near the doctor, was dazed and apparently did not know just what would happen next, so bewildered she looked.

Finally the doctor called to Johnny, who had been holding the child when he had been summoned.

"The child must be moved to a hospital immediately. His condition is such that we must not waste time by waiting for an ambulance. Can we take him in your car?"

"Yes—right away," J. D. helped the doctor carefully pick the child up. The doctor started in the direction of the convertible and Johnny realized the doctor thought this car belonged to him. He did not correct him; but walked ahead to where Basil stood by the door of his car.

"The child has to be taken to the hospital immediately." It was a command and his manner warned one that he intended to have it carried out.

"Why can't you take him in your car? This has only one seat—and—" He looked toward the child. "He's filthy dirty!" Basil did not open the door.

They had almost reached the car, J. D. and the doctor carrying the limp little body as carefully as possible.

Johnny looked at Basil for only an instant. "Stand back, Martin. If you're not going to drive this crate, I am." His right fist caught Basil squarely on the jaw and he fell to the street.

Kit Unburdens Her Worries to Johnny

Johnny did not see Kit until he saw the doctor place the child in her arms in the seat beside him as he swung under the wheel and stepped on the starter. Even in that short glance he saw that she had been crying, for tears were still running down her cheeks.

Neither spoke, Johnny keeping his eyes intently on the road ahead. The doctor had said he would call a Doctor Kimberly at the hospital and make arrangements for the child to be taken to the operating room immediately.

As they were in sight of the hospital, Kit felt the child move in her arms and very slowly open his eyes. He looked at her solemnly for a long while, as if trying to understand where he was, and then smiled weakly.

"You're awful pretty—what you cryin' for?" But without waiting for an answer, he closed his tired eyes and let his head relax against her breast again.

In verification of the doctor's promise, the emergency door was opened for them as they drove inside the gate. Two internes were standing waiting with the stretchers. As Johnny brought the car to a stop beside them, it seemed as though the whole performance had been many times practiced, so precise and quickly was the child lifted up on the bed and wheeled away from Kit and Johnny.

They stood beside the car, not saying anything, for some minutes, then Johnny, looking at her, touched her arm.

"Kit—I'm going to drive you home—and then—I better give this car back to Martin." He helped her into the car and closed the door.

They drove to her uncle's in silence and it was only as they got out of the car that she asked in a voice that was almost a whisper, "Johnny," her voice was uneven with half-silenced sobs, "Johnny, do you think he'll... Oh, Johnny, he can't—he just can't!" She leaned over and put her head in her hands, sobbing.

Johnny knew that something was wrong. The sympathy she was showing for the child was true enough, but there had been something before this. He remembered quickly that it was only this morning that he had intended asking her when she returned from lunch what was the matter... only a few hours ago and it seemed like weeks.

He knew, though, that now would not be the time to question her. He put a hand on her shoulder and brought her close to him, letting her cry against him. He knew that it was better she should have it over with.

Finally she was quiet in his arms. Only her eyes told him the emotion she had was finished and spent. They were still brimming with tears.

"Johnny—whatever would I do without you?" She tried to smile at him, but was not quite successful. "I'm sorry I let go like that. It was sort of everything at once. Uncle Frank and that little boy."

"Johnny, you should have seen him when he got home last night. That poor old man. After working for over forty years at a desk, they send him out on the loading crew, the hardest job in the place. But he didn't quit! Even though it almost killed him. But he won't have to do that again!" There was determination written on her face. "Tomorrow he'll go back to his old job again, if he isn't too proud and thinks I arranged it." The last was more to herself than to Johnny.

Johnny's mind worked quickly. Now it was clear. Martin had thrown Deeser out when Kit had preferred his and J. D.'s company to Basil and his father's, the night he had caught Murphy. He shook his head as if it were almost impossible for anyone to be so low as this. Kit had called Basil this noon and had made up with him and also gotten her uncle's job back again for him. It was as simple as that. And as rotten as that!

"Kit, honey, listen to me. Everything will turn out all right. No body blames you. You go in now and grab yourself a few hours rest and this evening we'll go over to the hospital and see the kid. He'll want to see you—he thought you were pretty, remember?"

"All right, Johnny. I'll go in." She got out of the car and then turned toward him once more. "Thanks, Johnny, thanks for everything."

Concern About The Injured Boy

Basil was gone when he got out to Lucy's. There was no sign of anything unusual having happened. The boys were still playing football in the middle of the street. One of two of the children looked at him inquiringly, as though he might tell them what had happened to their little playmate, but he kept away from them. After all, what could he tell them?

He was undecided just what to do with the car. He thought once of driving it to Martindale and leaving it parked in the driveway, but decided against it. He would leave it here and Basil would probably send someone for it. At any rate, he did not intend to worry about it. He left it parked near the streetlight in case no one should come for it until dark.

He started walking in the direction of the hospital. He had gone only a block when J. D. came down the street toward him in the jalopy. When he got in the car and saw J. D.'s face, he was afraid to ask about the child.

"You come from the hospital, Dad?" he asked slowly.

J. D. nodded his head. "He's got a pretty slim chance, son. It's a bad skull fracture. They're doing everything they can."

The memory of his grandmother flashed across Johnny's mind. If it hadn't been for her this would never have happened. Basil was at fault, but not so much as Jennifer Martin. He decided. A feeling of hatred for her came into him, but at once he had with it the picture of his mother, and he knew she would not want this. What had he told Kit only a few minutes before? "Everything will work out all right!" He must remember that for himself.

And for a moment he almost believed it.

By eight o'clock that evening the child's condition was unimproved. The operation was over. Now there was nothing to do but wait.

Crazy Hat Wins Refrigerator!

One of those "Breakfast in the morning" radio shows came to Capitol City last week, and Sarrah Carey won first prize for wearing the craziest hat in the audience. It was a full-sized refrigerator! (The prize, not the hat.)

"Glad them hats of hers paid off at last," says Ed, treating the whole thing like a joke. But you could see he was proud of Sarrah.

From where I sit, there's another thing Ed can be proud of: the way he's put up with those hats of Sarrah's, with never a criticism; just as she's put up with Ed's pipe and the other little freedoms he enjoys.

They've got that refrigerator home now, stocked with beer; and we're going over tonight to drink a toast—not just to Sarrah's hat, taking first prize... but to a happily married couple, who've learned to live with one another's differences in tastes—whether it's a taste for hats or beer!

Chevrolet Presents New Truck

Unprecedented improvements and advancements for the comfort and convenience of the driver are featured in the new "advance-design" line of Chevrolet trucks and commercial cars which are being shown to the public for the first time June 28 by Chevrolet dealers across the nation. Shown above is a heavy-duty chassis and cab with a gross vehicle weight of 16,000 pounds and a payload capacity of five tons. The vehicle has a 137-inch wheelbase and accommodates bodies up to nine feet long. The steel cab is all-welded and will seat three men comfortably. New cabs and bodies, featuring new fenders, grille and hood, combine highest appearance standards with greater operating efficiency.

Speed Trout Plant Program

With more than two-fifths of trout season elapsed and only one-fifth of the season's production of legal-sized trout planted, Conservation Department fish hatchery men are stepping up their planting program to get the full million "keeper" trout into the streams and lakes before Labor Day.

Bad weather is the villain in the fish planting picture. Side roads were impassable long after the usual dates this Spring. Streams continued roiled and swollen long after opening day. But where fish-planting trucks could not go, neither could fishermen's cars get in.

In spite of a crowded schedule, the fish-planting crews are taking more than customary pains to assure even distribution of the hatchery fish. Boat planting is being done wherever feasible, and in streams too shallow for boats, hatchery workers are dragging planting crates behind them as they wade the smaller waters, dipping a few out every few paces to prevent their bunching at bridges or other spots where they make "easy pickins" for the first fishermen who come along.

In April and May the legal-size trout plantings in the Upper Peninsula included 28,300 brook trout, 9,200 brown trout, 400 rainbow trout and 7,000 six-inch lake trout in inland waters. Another 220,000 inch-long lake trout were planted in Lake Superior.

In the northern half of the Lower Peninsula 70,725 brook trout, 24,830 brown trout and 26,090 rainbow trout, all of a ready-to-catch size, were put into the streams in May. Hatchery men of this region also planted 28,000 lake trout and co-operated in the planting of several thousand brook and rainbow trout produced by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

In the southern half of the Lower Peninsula, hatcherymen in the month of May stocked 11,550 brook, 8,050 rainbow and 3,750 brown trout, and 2,000 two-year-old laketrout besides.

Lampreys Will Not Attack Swimmers

Have no fear of sea lampreys, the Conservation Department's fish division is advising bathers at the state's beaches and swimming holes in the first days of real Summer weather.

The lamprey run is now on, many weeks late, with larger numbers showing up where Southern Michigan streams empty into the Great Lakes. But Fred A. Westerman, chief of the department's fish division, assures swimmers that though sea lampreys live by sucking the blood and flesh of fishes, none has ever been known to attack a human being in the water.

Swimmers will be thanked, however, for reporting to Conservation officers the presence of any sea lampreys seen swimming in their company.

Score of New Rules Enacted

Out of the dozens of conservation bills considered at the session of the Legislature just ended, more than a score of new rules affecting every hunter and fisherman are materializing. Topping the list is the modernization of Michigan's scale of license fees, raised for the first time since they were trimmed in depression days.

Fishermen already have been advised that their new license schedule does not apply until 1948. The inland fish bill, yet to be signed by the Governor, provides that next year they will pay 50 cents more for the general resident rod license and if they fish for trout, $1 for a trout stamp. Non-residents will pay $2 for 10 days, $3 for the year, and buy the stamp besides, if they fish for trout. But residents' wives still will get a free license when their husbands buy one, and fishing in the Great Lakes without a license will continue.

Other major changes embodied in the inland fish bill, as summarized by the Conservation Department, would: Extend trout season through second Sunday in September—not this season, but next; increase the number of streams open to Fall rainbow trout fishing; earmark trout stamp income for trout propagation; eliminate special cisco licenses; legalize fishing for bluegills through the ice at night; approve emergency fishing where winterkill threatens; and set a new creel limit of five lake trout on inland waters, no creel limit on lake trout in Great Lakes and connecting waters—all in 1948 and thereafter.

Among changes in the commercial fishing law, given immediate effect, are restoration of northern pike to the commercial list when taken in commercial fishing gear from the Great Lakes, and increased license fees for commercial fishermen, including an increase from $10 to $15 for sport trollers for lake trout for hire.

The general game bill, if signed by the Governor, will become effective 90 days after final adjournment, providing then a complete new schedule of hunting license fees and earmarking 50 cents of each small game license for paying a $5 bounty on red fox. New license fees for residents would be $2 for small game hunting, $3.50 for deer hunting, $2 for trapping—up from the present rates of $1, $2.25 and $1.50. Non-residents would pay $15 for small game hunting, $35 for gun deer hunting, $10 for bow and arrow deer hunting.

Other changes embodied in the general game bill would fix 10 A. M. as the daily starting hour for all small game hunting, except for waterfowl, in the lower half of the Lower Peninsula on the first two days of pheasant season; and would abolish gun permits but make licenses void between sunset and sunrise in closed season and void in the 15 days before small game season. The same measure would prohibit rifles larger than .22 caliber or shotguns with slugs or ball load in deer areas in the five days before deer season, except for transporting hunting arms to camp. A 5:30 P. M. closing hour for small game hunting was rejected.

The Legislature provided a "one deer" season for archers in Gogebic, Roscommon, Montmorency, Crawford, Newaygo, Alpena, Benzie, Leelanau, Iosco, Montcalm, Ionia, Oscoda, Ontonagon, Iron, Schoolcraft, Mackinac and Lapeere Counties.

Conservation Department appropriation bills were approved with some slight reductions.

Voting on Sunday hunting bans was authorized in Genesee, Jackson and Macomb Counties. Genesee voters already have rejected the proposal, Jackson voters have approved it.

The minimum penalty for wilful illegal killing or possession of deer was increased from $10 to $50.

Creation of dog training areas, where dogs may be trained at any season of the year was authorized.

By permitting use of funds earmarked for reforestation where the need is greatest and prospects of a good crop best, the Legislature cleared the way for an extensive department reforestation program.

After 20 years of complete protection, sturgeon were returned to the list of available fish, and may be speared next Winter through the ice of inland waters.

Among measures considered and rejected were free fishing, hunting and trapping licenses for tax-paying residents over 65; a ban on oil well drilling in inland or Great Lakes waters or within 300 feet of Great Lakes shores; legalization of private shooting preserves; reservation of public hunting and fishing rights in all state lands sold; discretionary power over seasons and bag limits by the Conservation Commission; safety inspection of rowboats for hire; and killing of antlerless deer in northeastern Michigan where Winter starvation has been most serious. A proposal to permit the charging of fees for camping in State parks failed of passage in the final stage of its progress through the legislative machinery.

Traverse Celebration To End on July 3rd

To prevent July Fourth vacations from running into a big traffic jam, Traverse City's Centennial celebration will be definitely ended with a fireworks display over Grand Traverse Bay on the night of Thursday, July 3.
Independence Day will bring thousands of vacation cars north, carrying passengers whose chief aim is to get away from the crowds for the week end holiday and a traffic bottleneck in and around Traverse City, due to the Centennial celebration, would be an annoyance and might seriously hamper their holiday schedule.

In recent years July Fourth has become a dispersal day in the vacation area of Northwestern Michigan. No longer do crowds gather to see parades and hear firecrackers, but rather they make family plans for picnics, fishing trips and sightseeing tours and Traverse City feels an obligation to these crowds to keep the highways as clear as possible.

So the Centennial observance will be held on two big days,
Wednesday and Thursday, July 2 and 3, days well packed with parades and pageants and other events typical of a community celebrating its 100th birthday.

One of the features of the final day will be the heard judging contest in which the winners will be selected from among 2,000 bewhiskered males. This will be Thursday evening and will be followed immediately by the public shaving contest.
